

your future in art

Join us for this interactive panel discussion as we explore your future in art. You will be able to ask questions of three highly regarded professional artists in sculpture, illustration and design. Stay after the panel to chat one-on-one with the artists and discuss your career aspirations.

Jennifer Corio, metal sculptor & business owner

Jennifer Corio has always been creative, but not always an artist. Choosing the paths of engineering and marketing, Jennifer used her creativity and business savvy in the high-tech world. She left corporate life in 2001. After taking a few welded sculpture classes, she was hooked. She designs sculptures for public and private collections using a wide variety of metals, fabrication techniques and finishes. Jennifer is a member of Women Who Weld, a six-woman artist collaboration that has completed two large-scale public commissions in the Vancouver area. Along with husband Dave Frei, Corio owns Cobalt Designworks LLC, specializing in artistic metalwork.

cobaltdesignworks.com

Mark Fearing, illustrator/author

Mark Fearing is an award-winning illustrator, cartoonist and animator from Scandia, MN. Mark has experience in a wide variety of commercial illustration, including working as a syndicated panel cartoonist. Mark is also an accomplished art director, having worked for Gamut Studios, Sony Online Entertainment, Freemantle Television and Walt Disney Television Animation. Mark's animated short films have played in film festivals around the world and have been broadcast on American and British television. His illustrations for the picture book, The Book That Eats People, have won several awards. He is currently working on four new picture books, and his graphic novel, Earthling!, will be published by Chronicle Books in spring of 2012. markfearing.com

Chuck Spidell, graphic & web designer, business owner

With over 12 years of experience in web and graphic design, Chuck Spidell uses a mix of experimentation, intuition and strategy to make decisions about his clients' brands. He began playing with design in high school by making custom covers for the mixtapes that he would share with his friends. Today, Chuck has a passion for working with nonprofit and humanitarian organizations, such as the Sierra Club, Friends of African Village Libraries and CARE. He believes "compelling, fresh and authentic design can change our world." His company, Illusio Design, serves clients such as American Public Media, CivicActions, Comcast, Intel, Depave, Humanitarian Resources International, Montavilla Farmers Market, Local Goods, Muddy River Design, Adidas and more. illusiodesign.com

PART OF THE Southwest
Washington 2011 Regional High School a r t s h o w

www.esd112.org/artshow

For more information, contact Mike Watters, art show coordinator, at 360.750.7500 X 253 or mike.watters@esd112.org

FREE & open to the public!

Tuesday, March 8, 2011 • 5:30-7 p.m.

Educational Service District 112

2500 NE 65th Ave., Vancouver, WA

No registration required. Please join us early for this special event, and stay after the panel to meet the artists and attend the awards ceremony.