

CCAA Begins Second Year!

Goal of 30 students met within first

As of September 27, the CCAA had enrolled 31 students from five school districts in Clark County. These students are currently participating in ten different career and technical education classes. Students spend half of their day in the CCAA credit recovery lab and the other half in a career and technical education class. This formula seems to be taking hold as a valuable option for students at risk of dropping out in the Clark County region.

Students can enroll in the CCAA throughout the year.

Advisory Board seeks volunteers

The CCAA Advisory Board is currently seeking volunteers from schools, parents, and social service agencies. The board meets three or four times throughout the year and plans to focus on the program's evolving vision, mission, and goals. It is important to have a diversity of perspectives present during this process so that we can give our students the best service. Our goal is to have every school and social service agency represented on the board. If you or someone you know is interested in participating in the vital role of CCAA Advisory Board Member, please contact Tim Foley at 360-604-1050.

Director of Skills Center offers CCAA students the "Attendance Challenge"

Dennis Kampe

Dennis Kampe, the Director of the Clark County Skills Center, has issued a unique challenge to CCAA students. Show up on time every day for a month and receive a crisp twenty dollar bill. Show up on time every day for 16 weeks in a row and receive an additional one hundred dollars!

After issuing the challenge to CCAA students, Kampe went back to his office and crunched the numbers. If all 30 students had perfect attendance for the year he would have to fork over more than $11,000.

This incentive has generated quite a buzz in the CCAA classroom. During the month of September 8 students were recognized for their perfect attendance record. While this cost Mr. Kampe $160, he seemed happy to pay it.

Said Kampe, "Showing up for school is like showing up for work. It's an important habit to form and that's why we encourage it."
